From Chandigarh Book Now Sikkim Package! Gangtok, the illustrious capital of Sikkim, India, was founded in the 1840s as a sacred site for Buddhist pilgrims. After the end of British colonialism, it evolved into the capital of an independent monarchy and officially became part of India in 1975. Today, Gangtok is a distinguished center for Tibetan Buddhism and a crucial gateway for adventurers seeking to explore the breathtaking Himalayas.

Pelling, a quaint town nestled at the base of Mount Khangchendzonga in northeastern Sikkim, boasts the historic Sanga Choling Monastery, established in the late 17th century, which offers stunning mountain vistas. The Pemayangtse Monastery is renowned for its exquisite wall paintings, intricate sculptures, and a magnificent gold-plated statue of Guru Padmasambhava.

Darjeeling, located in the Himalayan foothills of West Bengal, India, was once a favored summer retreat for the British Raj elite. It continues to serve as the terminus for the charming narrow-gauge Darjeeling Himalayan Railway, affectionately known as the “Toy Train,” which was completed in 1881. The region is celebrated for its unique black tea cultivated on the lush plantations that grace its hillsides, all set against the majestic backdrop of Mt. Kanchenjunga, one of the tallest peaks in the world.
